Habitat for Humanity of Bucks Coun-ty's recent fundraising gala raised $110,000 to support Habitat's affordable homeownership and home repair pro-grams that benefit local families. Hard Hats and High Heels included a silent auction, live auction and an appeal for donations. The 250 guests at the gala gave a standing ovation to the Habitat homeown-er family who shared the story of their journey from Colombia and how afford-able homeownership helped them achieve able homeownership helped them achieve the strength, stability and self-reliance they needed to build a better future. The event also honored two of Habitat's dedievent also honored two of Habitat's dedi-cated community partners, The Leff Fam-ily Foundation (Partner of the Year) and Penn Community Bank (Spirit of Habitat Award):

A unique aspect of Habitat for Humanity of Bucks County's Hard Hats and High Heels auction is that it included items destined for landfills that were transformed into unique furnishings and given new life by area designers. Through a Designer Challenge, items that were donated to Habitat's ReStore were upcycled into something useful and creative, then auctioned off. During the gala, guests also had the opportunity to make donations to help purchase materials Habitat uses to build – foundations, doors and windows.

Wells Fargo provided a $10,000 match for donations of $100 or more, bringing the total raised in donations alone to more than $30,000.

Portraits of Change

PORTRAITS

CHĂNGE

An acrylic painting of Gandhi by Grace Porter and one of Martin Luther King Jr. by Ella Walsh are part of "Portraits of Change," an exhibition by area students promoting peace by using their paint brushes to pay tribute to individuals who were devoted to peace, tolerance, equality and helping others. The students, ages 9 to 17, are from Newtown, Yardley and Holland, and have created 28 portraits on display at Countryside Gallery, 2 S. State St., Newtown, June 3 to 11. The exhibition is free, but donations will be given to The Peace Center in Langhorne. For gallery hours, call 215-968-2246.

Coalition for homeless honors volunteers

The Coalition to Shelter and Support the Homeless, which operates the Central Bucks Code Blus Shelter, hosted a Volunteer Appreciation Luncheon Sunday, April 30, at St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Doylestown.

The Coalition to Shelter and Support the Homeless (CSSH) is an alliance of faith-based and community service organizations assisting unsheltered adults in Central Bucks County. CSSH's primary mission is to provide shelter to unhoused adults on cold nights from December through March each winter. At the same time, the organization links the homeless and financially distressed to needed resources that may be available to help resolve crucial issues, which contribute to homelessness, poverty and suffering among this population.

This past winter, CSSH provided shelter, meals and supplies to 59 individuals on 70 cold nights. This individuals on 70 cold nights. This work would not be possible without the support, service and sacrifice of more than 215 volunteers who give of their time to supervise the shelter, including covering overnights shifts and providing a warm meal, needed supplies, and most importantly, compassionate encouragement to those in need in the community.

MIT Solutions of Central Buck a full-service technology provise to small and medium business in the Bucks County area. Our Mission is to provide these businesses value-based

A lot of people are asking lots of questions as a result of this month's global ransomware attack. They want to know how they can protect themselves from such an incident or how they can enhance the security of their data and digital identity. Currently, questions of this nature are more critical than ever, especially after more than 200,000 computers in over 150 countries were infected with the WannaCry malware.

The hard truth is that no single security practice or strategy can provide comprehensive protection. That is why a layered or multi-tiered approach is needed. A layered approach utilizes several different solutions like proactive maintenance and monitoring including, up-to-date anti-virus and anti-malware, password management, data encryption, automatic backup, and on line common sense to weave a tapestry of components that, taken together, can provide strong security.

CMIT Solutions has collected 6 of our top strategies for protecting your data and digital identity. Some can be implemented immediately, and some by a trusted IT provider.

- 1. Make sure software updates and security patches are completed automatically and regularly.
- Construct a protective barrier of antispam, anti-malware, anti-virus and network security solutions around all of your devices and data.
- 3. Be careful with suspicious emails, annoying pop-ups and "too good to be true ads or offers.
- 4. Back up ALL of your data on a regular basis.
- Use strong passwords, employ two-factor authentication, and consider an all-in-one password manager.
- 6. For businesses, develop and implement employee security practices.
